57 added to Order of Canada

HONOUR Gov. Gen. Michaëlle Jean has announced 57 new appointments to or within the Order of Canada.

Hockey great Mario Lemieux, music legends Burton Cummings of the Guess Who and Neil Young, and filmmaker Ivan Reitman were named officers of the order.

Former New Democrat leader Alexa McDonough and former clerk of the Privy Council Mel Cappe were also named officers of the order.

New members of the order include aboriginal actress Tantoo Cardinal and former Montreal Canadians captain Emile (Butch) Bouchard, who led the Habs to four Stanley Cups.

The Order of Canada is one of the country's highest civilian honours, and was established in 1967 to mark a lifetime of outstanding achievement, dedication to community and service to the nation.

Is this the team to bring us Olympic hockey gold?

The talent has been assembled — from scoring star Sidney Crosby to veteran captain Scott Niedermayer to 20-year-old surprise Drew Doughty — and now the roster for the Canadian men's Olympic hockey team is known.

In a Saskatoon hall packed with about 4,000 screaming supporters, executive director Steve Yzerman and his management team read off the names yesterday of the 23 players who will skate for Canada at the Vancouver Games in February.

It was no surprise that Crosby, the Pittsburgh Penguins scoring star who will carry much of the load of the country's sky-high expectations, was named after he was controversially left off the aging team that finished a disastrous seventh at the 2006 Games in Turin, Italy.

"This is a special honour," Crosby told reporters in New Jersey before facing the Devils last night. "I'm pretty proud of it.

"From here on in it's going to be a pretty popular subject, not that it wasn't already. To be able to put faces on the team; I think everyone is getting more and more excited for it, and this is the next step in that process."

The list includes unexpected names as well, starting with Doughty, the gifted Los Angeles Kings defenceman who drew rave reviews at the world championships last spring, and Boston Bruins forward Patrice Bergeron, lauded for his faceoff and penalty-killing skills.

Dallas Stars winger Brendan Morrow was another who made the team, while several veterans of past Olympic teams, including Vincent Lecavalier, Shane Doan, Ryan Smyth and Martin St. Louis, were overlooked.

Niedermayer will serve as captain with fellow defenceman Chris Pronger, Crosby and Calgary Flames star Jarome Iginla as the alternates.

"(At) first glance, it looks younger, but extremely talented, with guys who have had success at all different levels," said Iginla.

The goaltenders were obvious picks — veteran Martin Brodeur, Roberto Luongo and Marc-Andre Fleury.

The defence includes the Chicago Blackhawks duo of Duncan Keith and Brent Seabrook, as well as Shea Weber and Dan Boyle.

Combinations from club teams were favoured, including the dynamic top line of the San Jose Sharks — Joe Thornton, Dany Heatley and Patrick Marleau — and the Anaheim Ducks duo of Ryan Getzlaf and Corey Perry.

Sniper Rick Nash, centre Eric Staal, physical centre Mike Richards, gritty winger Morrow and versatile young forward Jonathan Toews also made the cut.

Yzerman was confident he and his team picked the best mix of talent from Canada's deep pool, but acknowledged that very good players had to be left off the list.

The Canadian team will be relatively young. Twelve of the 23 players are currently 25 or younger.

Journalist, four soldiers killed in Kandahar blast

Four soldiers and a journalist were killed yesterday by a powerful improvised explosive device in the worst loss of Canadian life in Afghanistan in two and a half years.

The five deaths occurred as the soldiers in armoured vehicles patrolled in what was considered to be a safe part of southern Kandahar city.

The military did not immediately release any names because of problems notifying family.

However, journalists on the base identified the reporter killed as Michelle Lang, 34, a reporter with the Calgary Herald. She was in the back of an armoured vehicle at the time.

"Yesterday, Canada lost five citizens," Brig.-Gen. Daniel Menard, commander of coalition forces in Kandahar, said early today.

"The soldiers were conducting a community security patrol in order to gather information on the pattern of life and maintain security in the area."

One Canadian civilian official was also hurt, Menard said.

Chaos calming at Pearson

After days of lineups in Canada's busiest airport and long delays for U.S.-bound flights, the situation appears to have eased. Scott Armstrong, a spokesman for the Greater Toronto Airports Authority, said yesterday was a "pretty close" to a normal day at Pearson International Airport. New restrictions for flights to the U.S., including no carry-on bags allowed, were put in place after a thwarted alleged attempt to blow up a plane Christmas Day. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Peel police boast 100% murder clearance rate

CRIME Peel Regional Police detectives in Mississauga, Brampton and Caledon have solved 100 per cent of the region's murders in three of the past four years — and as 2009 draws to a close, they're close to doing it again. It's an almost unheard of record: Toronto's rate, called a clearance rate, is just more than 53 per cent this year, one of its lowest ever.

Peel's success is even more impressive in the context of a rising number of homicides in the region.

The three most recent years have seen the most homicides in the Peel force's history, with a record-setting 27 in 2008 and 21 so far in 2009. This trend is partly due to the result of gentrification and police pressure pushing crime out of Toronto.

"There's been a suburbanization of homicides — the suburbs of yesterday have become the inner cities of today," says Michael Chettleburgh, founder of crime consultancy group Astwood Strategy Corporation. "There are people saying, 'It's getting hot here, I'm going to go elsewhere.'"

Cheap new year's fun across GTA

You can play in a pool, hang out with orangutans or skate circles beneath the city's lights.

Get ready for New Year's Eve on the cheap.

Tens of thousands of midnight revellers are expected to descend on Nathan Phillips Square tonight for the Citytv New Year's Bash 2010.

Partygoers can strap on skates while a free concert, featuring Canadian hip-hop heavyweight Kardinal Offishall, carries the celebration to the countdown.

But for those further afield, there are free New Year's Eve parties dotted across the GTA.

- Brampton: Face painting, fireworks and live rock 'n' roll. It will be as fun as a Kiss concert, only better — there's marshmallow roasting. Things kick off at 7 p.m. at Gage Park, and continue outside City Hall and the Rose Theatre.
- Oshawa: Does staying up until midnight just sound hard? Check out the family new year's event at the Legends Centre on Harmony Road North. There will be swimming and prize giveaways starting at 6 p.m., and the countdown begins at 9:15 p.m.
- Pickering: Dig into popcorn or a sno-cone at the family countdown, running from 7-9 p.m. at the Pickering Recreation Complex, one block east of the Town Centre on Valley Farm Road.
- The Toronto Zoo: Party like an animal. The children-oriented activities include visits with the keepers and animals of the Indo-Malaya and African Rainforest pavilions from 6-9 p.m. Tickets are $6 to $10 and space is limited.
- Scarborough: Celebrate the new year with clowns, noisemakers and hay rides at the Scarborough Civic Centre. The party runs from 7 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

RICK EGLINTON/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Riders enter the Queen streetcar near Bay Street in this file photo. Toronto has managed to evade the heavy snowfalls that have plagued some areas of the country, with only 4.5 centimetres of snow hitting the ground so far this winter.

Toronto still in a 'snow drought'

WEATHER Get your boots, ice scrapers and snow shovels ready: We are about to commit the journalistic equivalent of poking the weather gods with a fairly sharp stick.

Toronto is a little light on snow this year, especially when you stack it up against some of the monster storms being reported around the world.

"There is certainly snow all about us, but somehow we have missed it," said David Phillips, senior meteorologist with Environment Canada, describing conditions across southern Ontario and particularly in Toronto. "We are in a snow drought."

As of yesterday, the University of Toronto weather station had recorded just 4.5 centimetres of snow this winter, 35 centimetres less than what we typically get this time of year. Downtown typically fares far worse than the outskirts of the city, recording up to 15 centimetres more snow than the station at Pearson Airport, said Phillips.

This winter, Pearson has recorded 14.2 centimetres, still well below the 38 expected by this time of year.

The record low belongs to 2006, when only 1.6 centimetres of snow was recorded at Pearson up to the end of December.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Meanwhile, elsewhere in Canada ...

- As of yesterday, Muskoka had recorded more than 196 centimetres of snow, more than half of that in a single storm that prompted Huntsville officials to declare a snow emergency.
- Storms have blanketed New Brunswick. Cars have gone off the road in blowing snow in Prince Edward Island, and in parts of Quebec, ice storms resulted in power cuts to thousands of homes.

Income tax to drop for many Ontario residents

FINANCE Revenue Minister John Wilkinson says many Ontario residents will see their income taxes go down starting Jan. 1.

He says 93 per cent of residents will get a one per cent tax cut in the new year, and many will be able to see it when they get their January paycheque.

That's when the provincial rate on the first $37,106 of taxable personal income will fall to 5.05 per cent from 6.05 per cent.

The tax cut is part of a larger package that includes one-time relief cheques and new credits that are meant to offset the impact of tax harmonization.

Merging Ontario's eight per cent sales tax with the five per cent federal GST next July will increase the cost of many items that were previously exempt from the provincial levy — from gasoline to Internet bills, haircuts and real estate fees.

That's raised the ire of Kevin Gaudet from the Canadian Taxpayers Federation, who says the HST is going to hurt consumers no matter how the government tries to dress up the new tax.

Experts say lower and middle-income earners, as well as anyone buying a home for less than $500,000, will benefit the most from the changes.

Wealthy people will end up being taxed more because they tend to spend more money, and First Nations say they will be worse off because they can't keep their point-of-sale exemption from the provincial portion of the new 13 per cent tax.

United Way hopes to hit fundraising goal

CHARITY Thousands across Greater Toronto reached out this year to the less fortunate and supported United Ways in their communities — from Oakville, Peel and York Regions to Ajax, Pickering and Uxbridge.

United Way Toronto president and CEO Frances Lankin remained cautiously optimistic the $107.5-million goal will be met.

"I have confidence that in difficult times Torontonians will step up to the plate," she said recently, adding tough times call for extraordinary measures. If necessary, the campaign may be extended as it was last year to meet "urgent human needs." The final tally will be revealed mid-January.

Money raised in the 2009 campaign will support 200 front-line agencies and programs.

Harper decides to 'reboot' Parliament

Politicians taking break until after Olympics

The federal Conservatives have suspended Parliament until after the Winter Olympics, a move that gives Prime Minister Stephen Harper a tighter grip on the country's political agenda.

The Tories said yesterday they need to make a clean break and reboot Parliament now that the economy is no longer in crisis. They're even considering making prorogation an annual event, so they can start each year anew with a throne speech that serves as an overview of what they plan to do in the coming year.

But the opposition says the shutdown is just a ploy to avoid questions about the handling of Afghan detainees and climate change.

"The specific reason here is that Stephen Harper doesn't feel like coming back to town and answering questions about his government." NDP Leader Jack Layton

"The specific reason here is that Stephen Harper doesn't feel like coming back to town and answering questions about his government," NDP Leader Jack Layton said in an interview.

"Even though Canadians elected a majority of MPs to hold him to account, he prefers to stay away."

Instead of resuming work as scheduled Jan. 25, Parliament will start afresh March 3 with a speech from the throne, followed by a new budget the next day, said Dimitri Soudas, spokesman for Harper.

The prime minister did not make the announcement in person, nor did he meet face-to-face with the Governor General to ask for a formal prorogation. Rather, Harper made that request over the phone, Soudas said.

"Now is the time to also engage with constituents, stakeholders and businesses in order to listen to Canadians, identify priorities and to set the next stage of our agenda," Soudas said in justifying the suspension.

News in brief

PIPELINE A decade-long quest to build a pipeline through the Northwest Territories came one step closer to reality yesterday, with a key regulatory panel giving the more than $16-billion project the green light — with several conditions attached. The federally appointed Joint Review Panel, which has been weighing the possible effects of the Mackenzie Gas Project on Arctic ecosystems and communities since 2004, said the pipeline "could provide the foundation for a sustainable northern future."

DEATHS An increasing number of journalists around the world were killed in 2009, a chilling situation that is getting worse instead of better, Canadian Journalists for Free Expression said yesterday. This year, 101 journalists were killed in the line of duty because of their reporting, up from 87 in 2008.

Kevin Gregson leaves the Ottawa courthouse yesterday. Gregson was charged with first-degree murder and robbery after an Ottawa police officer was ambushed and stabbed to death while sitting in his cruiser outside an Ottawa hospital.

Suspect in cop killing in protective custody

The suspended Mountie charged with stabbing an Ottawa police officer to death has been placed in protective custody and under suicide watch.

Kevin Gregson, 43, appeared in an Ottawa courtroom early yesterday, charged with the first-degree murder of 51-year-old Const. Eric Czapnik.

Gregson also faces charges of theft of a car and using an imitation firearm in the commission of an offence. He is alleged to have stolen a car before the attack and driving it to the scene.

Czapnik was ambushed early Tuesday while sitting in his cruiser taking notes on an unrelated case. He had been parked outside a hospital in the cold and dark.

At the court hearing yesterday, the Crown requested that Gregson be banned from contacting five potential witnesses who still need to be questioned, mostly family members, including some children.

Hostage freed after more than 2 years

A British man abducted by Iraqi militants and held hostage for two and a half years was freed yesterday, alive and remarkably well, the British government said. Foreign Secretary David Miliband said computer consultant Peter Moore, left, had been handed over to Iraqi authorities by his captors and was in good health at the British Embassy in Baghdad.

Pro-government protesters turn out

IRAN Tens of thousands of hard-line government supporters turned out for state-sponsored rallies yesterday, some of them calling for the execution of opposition leaders as Iran's police chief threatened to show "no mercy" in crushing any new protests by the pro-reform movement. Some chanted "Death to Mousavi," a reference to opposition leader Mir Hossein Mousavi. Others shouted "Rioter hypocrites must be executed" with a banner that read: "We sacrifice our blood for the supreme leader." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Body scans to begin

Dutch will add controversial measure to airport security

The Netherlands announced yesterday it will immediately begin using full body scanners for flights heading to the U.S., issuing a report that called the failed Christmas Day airline bombing a "professional" al-Qaida terror attack.

A top Dutch official said a scanner of that type may have stopped Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab from boarding Northwest Airlines Flight 253 to Detroit from Amsterdam's Schiphol Airport Friday carrying undetected explosives. Law enforcement officials say the 23-year-old Nigerian tried but failed to detonate the explosives on a plane carrying more than 300 people.

"It is not exaggerating to say the world has escaped a disaster," Interior Minister Guusje Ter Horst told a news conference, referring to it as "another al-Qaida attack."

Body scanners that peer underneath clothing have been available for years, but privacy advocates say they are a "virtual strip search" because they display an image of the body onto a computer screen.

Ian Dowty, a lawyer with Action on Rights of the Child, said allowing minors to pass through the scanners violates child pornography laws.

"It shows genitalia," he told The Associated Press. "As far as English law is concerned ... it's unlawful if it's indecent."

U.S. President Barack Obama said the intelligence community should have been able to piece together information that would have raised "red flags" and possibly prevented Abdulmutallab from boarding the airliner.

Investigators said Abdulmutallab told them he received training and instructions from al-Qaida operatives in Yemen — which lies across the Gulf of Aden from Somalia.

Mac defeats PC

Apple finished first in October U.S. sales: Report

There are a lot of "what ifs" in the tech geek world.

What if Beta had eclipsed VHS?

What if Sony had decided in the 1950s that toasters made more sense than transistor radios?

But here's a crazy one. What if the Mac became the No. 1 computer choice in the world instead of the PC? Too off the wall?

Well, it just happened in October in the United States. Those stylish, 21-inch iMacs were the top-selling desktop for the month, according to market researcher NPD Group. The MacBook Pro took top spot in the notebook category.

NPD attributed the topsy-turvy sales numbers to the fact that October was a down month for PC dealers prior to the launch of Windows 7, which replaced the much-maligned Vista operating system.

Whatever the reason, it's a bit surprising considering that only a few short years ago Apple's computers were all but written off by some as a growth centre for the corporation, which was making its millions more and more through iPods, iTunes and iPhones.

"Apple computers have seen a renaissance of sorts in the last two or three years," agrees Harvard Business School Prof. David Yoffie, a veteran Apple watcher.

"That's been a function of many things. One is they've done a great job on design. Two is they've benefited enormously from the weakness in Microsoft. The failure of Microsoft Vista opened up the opportunity for Apple to gain significant share in the U.S. retail segment."

Markets see little change amid positive U.S. manufacturing data

STOCK The Toronto stock market closed with little change yesterday, with the TSX balanced by higher telecom stocks and lower mining shares amid positive data from the U.S. manufacturing sector.

The S&P/TSX composite index closed up 15.65 points at 11,717.46 on thin volume as 2009 trading wound down.

With the TSX up about 30 per cent this year and the S&P 500 ahead almost 25 per cent, many investors have closed their books and are making few moves ahead of the start of 2010. With fewer traders in the market, price swings can be exaggerated.

"I think what you're seeing is kind of people squaring away positions for the end of the year," said Colin Cieszynski, market analyst at CMC Markets Canada.

"Nobody really wants to go out and jump and down and do any buying because there's nobody around and, at the same time, there hasn't been any major reason to sell other than the market went up several days in a row and they're just kind of due for a pause."

New Year's Eve? I'm over it

Relating

Sofi Papamarko

metronews.ca/papamarko

"What are you doing for New Year's Eve?"

If you're like me, the answer is: "Nothing. Ever again."

After a decade of disappointing Dec. 31sts, I'm tempted to hole up with some DVDs, order a pizza and hit the sack at 12:01 a.m.

It pains me to admit this, but my parents have been right all along.

I have paid ridiculous sums of money to be wedged into packed bars that felt more like saunas. I have parted with $15 for a watered-down martini. I have seen flimsy high heeled shoes fall victim to ice and sleet. I have suffered as bone-chilling winds whipped my bare legs during failed attempts at hailing taxis.

I have been a fool.

I have had enough.

I am over New Year's Eve.

I've come to the realization that my fondest NYE memories are those low-key evenings I spent with people I care about.

1991: Watching Dick Clark's New Year's Rockin' Eve with my folks after going out to Red Lobster (fanciest!), sipping "bubbly" (Canada Dry … the champagne of ginger ales, I'll have you know), giddy to be staying up past my bedtime.

2000: Hanging out in a dear friend's basement. Mixing Mountain Dew and tequila (with predictably unfortunate results). Mortal Kombat. Junk food. Laughing until we cried.

2004: A sedate cocktail party in Kingston, Ont. Hors d'oeuvres. Quiet laming out. A chaste kiss shared with my university boyfriend at midnight.

Other Dec. 31sts blend together. Nights when midnight came too swiftly and too soberly. Unholy stress fests. And sh–t shows I'd sooner forget.

Tonight, droves of people will descend upon the hot spots of downtown Toronto to indulge in bottle service, lose their friends in crowds, pick fights, shriek in the streets and vomit on Blue Night buses.

I will not be among them.

I may head to an intimate potluck with some lovelies. I may embrace my inner hermit and head to bed at a reasonable hour. I may end up doing both.

So what if my plans aren't epic, expensive, or even exciting? It's just another night.

I hope wherever you're off to tonight, you'll be with your favourite people. Because if you're going to have a brutal night (and, let's face it, this is highly likely), it's probably a good idea to divide the brutality among people you love.

TWB: Keep the safe haven open

BroadMinded

Melinda Mattos

metronews.ca/broadminded

For those of us who work and play in the world of publishing, 2009 has been a year full of recession-fuelled endings. I sighed when Queen West's iconic indie bookstore Pages shut its doors, wept when I lost my longtime job as a magazine editor, and ranted when Canada's largest newspaper announced plans to outsource much of its labour. But the last straw came a few weeks ago.

After 36 years in business, the not-for-profit Toronto Women's Bookstore announced it's in financial crisis. Sales have not been strong enough to keep the shop afloat, and without community support, it will be forced out of business.

Though upsetting, the news didn't exactly come as a surprise. The Canadian Press reports since 2004, feminist bookstores have closed in Calgary, Saskatoon, Hamilton, London and Sudbury. The TWB says there are only 21 feminist bookstores left worldwide, down from 125 in 1994.

Independent booksellers just can't compete with the deep discounts offered by chain stores. Niche-market bookshops used to grant access to information you couldn't find anywhere else, but with the rise of the Internet, everything you're looking for (sex! politics! feminist theory!) is just a Google search away.

"The thing is, a feminist bookstore is about more than just books. It's about having a safe space to … find support."

The thing is, a feminist bookstore is about more than just books. It's about having a safe space to explore, build community and find support. For a teenage girl who's just realized she's gay, or a university student sick of reading about old white men, or a sexual assault survivor fighting to take ownership of her body, a feminist bookstore can be a safe haven.

When the TWB's board of directors was faced with the decision of whether to shut down the store immediately or stay open and fight, it chose to go public with its financial crisis. The store is planning to stay open for as long as it can, but it can't do it alone. If you care about the TWB, now's the time to get involved. (For details on the TWB's fundraising efforts, see www.womensbookstore.com or visit the shop at 73 Harbord St.)

The Toronto Women's Bookstore has given a lot to our city and it's time to give something back — before it's too late.

Asked on Twitter: "What do you think of the Canadian Olympic men's hockey roster? Who would you have picked instead?"

TORONTO

@mjstringer: Mike Green and Shane Doan — I get Vinny, Martin St. Louis and even Ryan Smyth.

@timfalconer: Patrice Bergeron will be gold for Canada … This bodes well: seven players from the scarily dominant 2005 World Junior team are on the Canadian Olympic team

@marcdeace: Looking at Canada's Olympic hockey roster I don't see them winning a gold medal. They lack playmakers like Savard and Lecavalier. Snipers like Stamkos and Doan. Also a hard hitting blueliner like Dion Phaneuf and very offensive blueliner like Mike Green.

HALIFAX

@PaulaC46: Niedermayer is a flake of a captain, least passionate on the team. Pronger is a pylon and dirty, but I agree with the rest

@MikeMcD76: I'm a Flames fan & I have NO problem with Iggy being the only Flame named. The Big 3 on D are not playing well.

CALGARY

@jess4002: very excited about team canada. all of them are solid players and the three goalies are outstanding.

@newsboycallsen: J-Bow should have made the cut. Iginla should have been captain, but Stevie Y made the right choice w/no Dion.

EDMONTON

@rainyfool: I would have preferred Shane Doan over Brendan Morrow.

VANCOUVER

@morfinictrauma: roster isnt bad, not sure y staal is there and doan isnt there. happy that doughty is on the team, surprised that bouw isnt

@deekayw: Canada picks Olympic hockey team. Sign I'm old: disappointed no Gretzky. Sign I'm out of touch: disappointed no Oilers.

New era dawns

Yzerman turns to next generation of players

Analysis

Steve Yzerman didn't play it safe.

The executive director of Team Canada took a bold approach in making his roster selections, calling on several young players at the expense of those with previous Olympic experience.

Yzerman didn't just sever ties to the team that had a disastrous seventh-place finish in Turin. He also signalled the beginning of a new era in Canadian hockey during a 40-minute announcement in Saskatoon yesterday.

"We didn't specifically go to a younger group or anything, that's just how our roster unfolded," said Yzerman.

"We've got a great group of young Canadian stars and at the end of the day, we just felt like a lot of these guys have overtaken some of our veteran guys and were more suitable to be on this team."

"We didn't specifically go to a younger group or anything, that's just how our roster unfolded."
Steve Yzerman, Team Canada director

Fifteen players will be wearing the Maple Leaf on hockey's biggest stage for the first time.

The most symbolic selection was that of 20-year-old defenceman Drew Doughty, who beat out several more experienced candidates. Jay Bouwmeester and Robyn Regehr were both in Turin and would have been safer selections for the final spot on the blue-line. Ditto for Mike Green.

Doughty really put himself on Yzerman's radar at the IIHF World Hockey Championship in May, where he was a standout for the Canadian team that earned silver in Switzerland. That helped earn him an invite to the summer orientation camp.

The Los Angeles Kings sophomore went on to claim one of seven spots on Team Canada's defence with a good start to the season.

Yzerman's toughest decisions seemed to come from his forward group and he showed a willingness to think outside the box. Not only did he leave off the fourth- and fifth-best Canadian scorers in the NHL this season (Martin St. Louis and Brad Richards), but he also added Patrice Bergeron, who wasn't even among the 46 players invited to the summer orientation camp.

Bergeron has a good history with Hockey Canada and started catching the eye of Yzerman and his management team every time they scouted his Boston Bruins.

Canadian junior hockey coach Willie Desjardins wasn't taking any chances yesterday.

With a tough game against the U.S. coming up on New Year's Eve, he gave his players the day off rather than skate them in practice.

They've certainly earned the break.

Canada has hammered the competition in its first three games, beating 16-0, Switzerland 6-0 and Slovakia 8-2. But the Americans have also looked strong in beating Switzerland 3-0, Slovakia 7-3 and Latvians 12-1.

Last year's team

- Canada's junior hockey team, which kept the country's run of gold alive in the face of long odds, has been named The Canadian Press team of the year for 2009.

Last year the North American rivals met in an identical situation in Ottawa. Both came into their final round-robin contest undefeated with a bye to the semifinals on the line, before Canada topped the Americans 7-4.

"First and foremost, it's a berth to the semifinals," said team captain Patrice Cormier, who was part of Canada's gold-medal-winning 2009 team. "It was a good rivalry, it was a good game and for the fans it's exciting.

"But we just want to win because we need that win to go to the semifinals."

Designer ups and downs

From his hugely popular new accessories line to his winning the prestigious Swiss Textile Award, designer Alexander Wang (pictured left) could practically do no wrong in '09. Meanwhile, for months, rumours had been circulating that the famously enigmatic designer Maison Martin Margiela had left his namesake. Just weeks ago, the brand finally confirmed what everyone already knew. KENYA HUNT/METRO WORLD NEWS

Fashion flashback '09...

The trends we embraced and the styles we can't wait to see on their way out!

Mad Men was a major fashion influence in 2009, with cinched belts and pencil skirts for women and skinny ties and tailored suits for men.

Zebra, leopard and snake patterns inspired an animal print craze in '09.

Faux fur will hopefully go the way of the dodo in '10.

We were mad for plaid and flannel in '09. Pictured: a creation from Canadian label Dsquared2.

Ugg boots are still hanging on despite previous predictions they would fade into oblivion. Here's hoping that 2010 is the year that Uggs are undone.

With MJ's planned comeback and passing, his fashion influence made a resurgence, '09 was awash in fedoras (right) and military jackets (above).

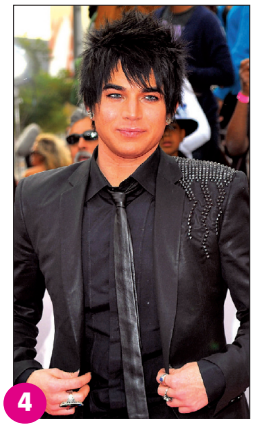
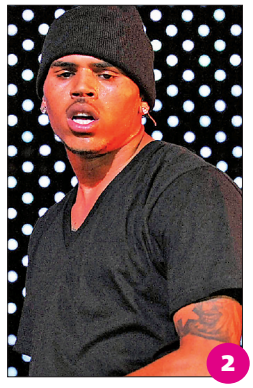
Top 5 music stories of 2009

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

It's been another wild year in the music industry — this one dominated by deaths, fights, meltdowns and surprise superstars. Here are the top 5 music stories of 2009.





Metro's top five music stories of the year include the breakthrough success of Lady Gaga, clockwise from left, Adam Lambert's skakeup of the American Idol brand, the sudden death of Michael Jackson, the downfall of Chris Brown and the overnight stardom of Susan Boyle.

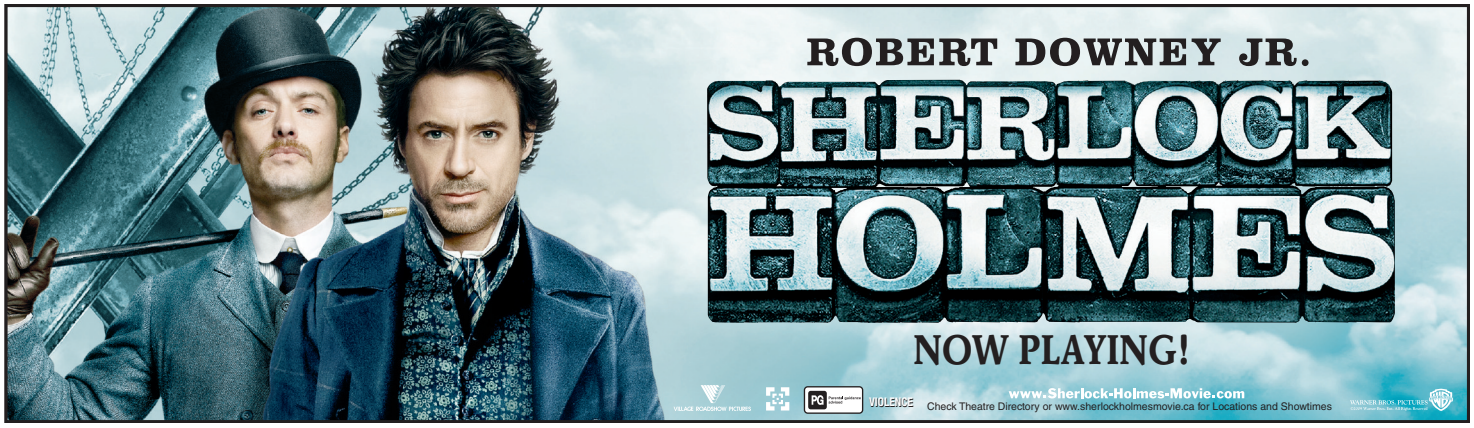
1. Michael Jackson's death: For someone who lived such a bizarre life, who knew it would be drugs that would kill him. Sure a doctor was injecting an anesthetic to help him sleep, but still, the King of Pop died just like many other significant musicians before him — with a needle in his arm. And like those artists, he's been more popular in death than he has been — at least for the last few years — in life. He dominated the Billboard charts for weeks after he died, claiming all top 10 spots, and he's sold millions of albums this year too. Jackson's death was a huge shock, but clearly, his music lives on.

2. Chris Brown's downfall: Until this year, Chris Brown was R&B's mench. His cute baby face endeared himself to millions of teen girls and his relationship with Rihanna was straight out of a storybook. But, that image was destroyed when he beat his girlfriend up in February. The news was shocking — but not nearly as appalling as Rihanna's bruises. He should have laid low, but instead he made excuses, blamed the victim and released an incredibly offensive record, with one song being about a "famous girl" who breaks hearts. Who knows if Brown will ever truly bounce back?

3. Susan Boyle: If there's anyone who summed up our relationship with celebrity culture this year, it was Susan Boyle. She went from no-name, unemployed Scot, to international superstar in one night. After singing I Dreamed A Dream on Britain's Got Talent, and blowing away the audience, everyone wanted a piece of Boyle. The attention literally drove her nuts — she became erratic, had violent outbursts and checked into a mental health clinic. But everyone likes a comeback, and when Boyle released her debut album, they got it. I Dreamed A Dream has sold 6.2 million copies worldwide, making it the best-selling album of the year.

4. Adam Lambert: In recent years American Idol has become a boring, staid affair. That was until the eccentric, makeup-wearing Adam Lambert came a long. While everyone took a shining to the California-born artist, it wasn't until he lost the idol crown that his journey really took off. He came out in the pages of Rolling Stone and then kissed his male keyboardist during the American Music Awards sparking a firestorm of criticism. Not only did Lambert's antics do wonders for his career — he sold 225,000 copies of For Your Entertainment in the U.S. during the first week of its release — he also rejuvenated the Idol brand and proved that rock 'n' roll shenanigans are still alive and well.

5. Lady Gaga: Lady Gaga wasn't a new phenomenon in 2009, but it was the year Gaga fever really exploded. It's hard to know where to start — she shot fire out of mechanical nipples at the at MuchMusic Video Awards, she was never without an outrageous costume, she headlined her first tour this year, her album The Fame is the second bestselling disc of '09 with 5.8 million copies sold, and, to cap things off, she is nominated for five Grammy Awards.



Spelling family reunion

Sounds like the Spelling family had a very merry Christmas indeed. After years of estrangement and very public, often nasty sparring, Candy Spelling and daughter Tori spent Christmas 2009 together, ET reports. USMAGAZINE.COM

Entertainment in brief

PEOPLE The TV producer accused of shaking down David Letterman to keep mum about his affairs is drawing on the Tiger Woods scandal to try to bolster his defence. In court papers, Robert (Joe) Halderman's lawyer cited reports that Woods paid an alleged mistress millions of dollars to stay silent. Attorney Gerald Shargel suggested that since the woman hasn't been charged with a crime, Halderman shouldn't be, either. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The decade ahead

How the next 10 years could change our lives

Apple's upcoming tablet device has the potential to change our lives in the same way the iPhone has for millions of people.

Ten years ago today, a Blackberry was a pager and we used Alta Vista instead of Google. "Encyclopedia" meant "Britannica," YouTube was inconceivable and there were no such things as iTunes, iPods or iPhones.

As we partied because it was 1999 (and worried that non-Y2K compliant computers would launch nukes at the stroke of midnight), we had no idea of the coming changes that would overhaul how music is made, marketed, distributed and consumed. Everything about music and the music business has been irrevocably changed.

So what will the next ten years bring? Here are a few wild guesses.

The rise of streaming services: Manually compiling and loading a playlist on an MP3 player will soon seem as primitive as painting hunting scenes on the wall of a cave. Imagine a customized playlist that's assembled for you and follows you everywhere. We'll slowly move away from owning music to accessing it whenever we want, wherever we happen to be and on whatever device we choose.

Satellite radio morphs into a streaming service: Why keep expensive satellites in orbit when Sirius/XM can soon use their existing infrastructure to provide customizable music streams through high-speed wireless networks?

The world in your dashboard: Within a few years, the standard AM/FM/CD unit will be as quaint as a gramophone. Using some form of always-on wireless connection, new in-dash entertainment systems will provide us everything from our individually customized music streams to real-time, super-localized traffic linked to your vehicle's GPS.

More cool new devices: Apple's upcoming tablet might very well change things the way the iPhone has. The secret sauce will be its array of apps that will allow it to do just about anything. We'll finally have our Star Trek tricorder.

The end of traditional radio, TV and print: Everything will coalesce into just "media" and "content" with audio, video and text delivered through the Internet and accessible on a variety of devices.

We'll have to rethink the old Canadian content rules: How can you maintain content quotas on an infinite Internet? Radio and TV, today's cultural gatekeepers as defined by the CRTC, will have to be cut some slack. Artists, labels, publishers and broadcasters all have skin in this game which will be highly emotional and extremely political.

Lots can happen in ten years. After all, in 1999, Pluto was still a planet.

Prison protesters fear Gibson shoot

MOVIES About 300 relatives of inmates at a Mexican prison where Mel Gibson is reportedly scheduled to make a movie protested outside the facility Tuesday, fearing their loved ones will be moved to make way for the production.

The group of protesters said it would be harder to visit inmates or bring them food if they are transferred out of the Gulf coast city of Veracruz.

One protester held a sign that read "No transfers to make a movie." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jon and Hailey plus abuse

Things are getting uglier between once-attached Jon Gosselin and Hailey Glassman. Glassman, 22, has filed a harassment complaint with the NYPD, her attorney tells the New York Post. "The document speaks for itself," Stephanie Ovadia says; the complaint also alleges verbal abuse. USMAGAZINE.COM

Thriller, Muppets will live on

Michael Jackson's Thriller video, with that unforgettable graveyard dance, will rest among the treasures in the world's largest archive of film, TV and sound recordings.

The 1983 music video directed by John Landis, though still the subject of lawsuits over profits, was one of 25 films to be inducted Wednesday for preservation in the 2009 National Film Registry of the Library of Congress.

It's the first music video named to the registry. It had been considered in past years, but following Jackson's death, the time was right, said Steve Leggett, coordinator of the National Film Preservation Board.

"Because of the way the recording industry is evolving and changing, we thought it would be good to go back to the development of an earlier seismic shift, which was the development of the music video," he said.

Joining the King of Pop in the 2009 class will be the Muppets from 1979's The Muppet Movie — the first time on the big screen for Kermit the Frog and Miss Piggy.

In this file photo from July 9, 2008, Kermit the Frog is seen at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington. The Muppet Movie, is one of 25 films to be inducted Wednesday in the 2009 National Film Registry.

The library works with film archives and movie studios to ensure original copies are kept safe. It also acquires a copy for preservation in its own vaults among millions of other recordings at the Packard Campus of the National Audio-Visual Conservation Center in the hills near Culpeper, Va.

"By preserving the nation's films, we safeguard a significant element of our cultural patrimony and history," said Librarian of Congress James H. Billington.

Congress established the registry in 1989, which now totals 525 films. They are selected not as the best American films but instead for their enduring importance to U.S. culture.

The library selects films that are "culturally, historically or esthetically" significant after reviewing hundreds of titles nominated by the public and consulting with the National Film Preservation Board.

Other notable titles include Once Upon a Time in the West (1968), directed by Sergio Leone, representing the "spaghetti western" genre that helped propel such rising stars as Clint Eastwood.

The oldest film inducted was Little Nemo (1911), a mix of live action and animation adapted from Winsor McCay's comic strip Little Nemo in Slumberland. The film, advanced for its time, influenced future animators, including Walt Disney. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Billboard's New Year's Eve Live

Maybe it's a message about recycling. Or maybe it's because Dick Clark snagged most of the A-list acts. In any event, much of the music in Fox's celebration from Las Vegas comes in the form of Billboard Music Awards footage. But fresh or recycled, it's a great lineup. And the show isn't without its live highlights — "American Idol" alums Kris Allen and Allison Iraheta and reggae-fusion singer/rapper Sean Kingston are slated to perform. CARLY POPE CARJACKED CTV News reports that Vancouver actor Carly Pope and her brother Kris were the ones involved in a carjacking in Vancouver on Tuesday. The two were reportedly in a car when a man jumped on the hood. Kris got out to confront him and the suspect then got into the car with Carly still inside, crashed into some cars and a building and injured himself, the Popes and another man. All four were taken to hospital and have since been released. THE CANADIAN PRESS

It feels strange to be in such a large space in Kensington.

Usually they're cramped and hurried. But here at Waterfalls, the room is looming with high ceilings and spread out tables.

The menu is extensive, but with "tapas," we wonder if we're going to be satisfied.

It turns out that most things are entrée sized. Phew! The prices are right too.

We start with the Non-Vegetarian Combo Platter ($11) of fried calamari, chicken and shrimp tikka. The calamari, enveloped in chickpea flour is phenomenal, as are the tamarind and raita dips that accompany it. The shrimp though, is too chewy and the chicken too dry.

Saag Paneer ($10) is heavier than expected, but good. Mutter Palavo ($4) not only has peas, but carrots and cashews, so get this instead of Plain ($3).

Waterfalls Curry Delights ($14) includes a choice of two curries served with rice, pappadum, mixed pickle and raita. I get Kerala Fish Curry (whitefish in a "spicy tamarind-based coconut milk") and Chicken Chettinad (chicken in an "authentic south Indian spicy masala"). The sauces are rich and complex — I can't get enough. The shrimp and fish are slightly overdone, though.

I'd go with the vegetarian selections here.

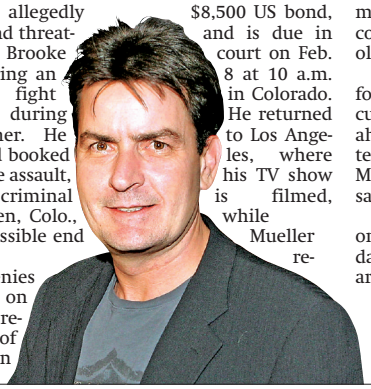
Sheen arrest won't affect show: Producers

GOOD TO KNOW THEY HAVE THEIR PRIORITIES STRAIGHT Don't worry about Two and a Half Men being a full man short going into its new season — Charlie Sheen will be back on the set of the hit CBS show on Jan. 4 as if his holiday domestic-abuse arrest didn't happen, people.com reports a source as saying.

"We'll assume that Charlie Sheen will definitely be there," a source close to production tells People. "We don't expect this to (affect the show)."

Sheen, 44, allegedly pulled a knife and threatened wife Brooke Mueller, 32, during an alcohol-fueled fight that broke out during Christmas dinner. He was arrested and booked for second-degree assault, menacing and criminal mischief in Aspen, Colo., and faces the possible end of his marriage.



Sheen, who denies pulling a knife on his wife, was released the night of his arrest on $8,500 US bond, and is due in court on Feb. 8 at 10 a.m. in Colorado. He returned to Los Angeles, where his TV show is filmed, while Mueller remained in Aspen with the couple's two nine-month-old sons.

Sheen hasn't yet been formally charged by prosecutors, but if they do go ahead, the production team of Two and a Half Men is ready, the source says.

"If he has to go to court on the 8th, it's only one day, and we can work around it," the source says.

Metro Recipe of the Day

Vegetable-Stuffed Chicken Breast

Submitted by: Karen Morine

INGREDIENTS:

-4 chicken breasts
-1/2 Cup broccoli
-1/2 Cup mushrooms
-1/2 Cup carrots
-1/4 Cup red, green or yellow peppers
-1 Tablespoon garlic (minced)
-1/2 Can low salt cream of chicken or mushroom soup
-1/2 Cup cheese shredded
-salt and pepper to taste

METHOD:

1. Take 4 fresh chicken breasts and pound out fairly flat.
2. Season chicken breast well with salt and pepper (or other desired spices for extra flavour).
3. Spray bake tray or grease with oil and place chicken pieces on.
4. Cut up fresh brocolli, mushrooms and carrots and dice red, green or yellow peppers. Cook in a pan on low heat until vegetables are soft and add garlic last. Add soup to vegetables and mix well. Add water if too thick.
5. Fill chicken breasts with the mixture. Hold together with a toothpick.
6. Cook in oven at 350 degrees for 20 minutes or until the chicken is white when cut in half.
